Live YouTube Content Product Details LPC (Live Presentation Content) is YouTube's solution for live event organizers who want to use the platform to present live content like speeches, lectures, and business presentations. Influencer marketing Influencer marketing is a type of advertising that involves enlisting the services of influential people, or "influencers," to promote a brand. The influencers are typically established personalities in a specific niche, and their followers trust their opinions and verdicts. Influencer marketing utilizes the social media platforms such as YouTube, Twitter, Instagram, Facebook, and Snapchat to advertise products or services. Influencer marketing also uses paid social media advertising and promotion. The effectiveness of influencer marketing is typically measured by its brand awareness and ad recall efforts. In 2017, Facebook reported that 1.56 billion people globally had seen an advertisement on the social media site within the time period ending in March 2017. This was up to 4 times the amount of people who saw an ad on YouTube in the same period. For brand awareness, influencer marketing drives more conversations about a brand than other types of ads, such as native ads or branded content, allowing brands to reach larger audiences and potentially increase awareness and reach.
